

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION 5

I. TEACHERS AS RESEARCHERS AND LEARNERS

1. Richard Kiely – The purpose, promise and potential of teacher research 11
2. Danuta Gabryś-Barker – The research orientation and preferences of pre-service EFL teachers 31
3. Anne Margaret Smith – TEFL training for inclusive classrooms 49
4. Meg Cassamally – Fostering teacher development through online reflectivity: A study of teacher trainees at the University of Siena 61

II. TEACHING AND LEARNING LANGUAGE FORMS

1. Jan Majer – Negotiation of form in foreign-language classroom discourse 79
2. Alan Fortune – Collaborative focus on form: What, why, when and how? 95
3. Mirosław Pawlak – Advanced learners' use of strategies for learning grammar: A diary study 109
4. Carol Griffiths and Zhou Chunhong – Researching error correction in China: Procedure, product and pitfalls 127
5. Anna Mystkowska-Wiertelak – The use of grammar learning strategies among secondary school students 139
6. Agnieszka Pietrzykowska – The effectiveness of focus on forms vs. focus on form in teaching English quantifiers 149
7. Mahmood Mehrabi – Vocabulary learning and retention: The usefulness of pre-reading and during-reading questions in EFL classes 159
8. Marta Rominiecka – Teaching pronunciation to adult learners: The advantages of explicit training 169
9. Magdalena Wrembel – In search of effective strategies for L2 pronunciation teaching and learning 179

III. ISSUES IN TEACHING LANGUAGE SKILLS

1. Bogusława Whyatt – Bilingual knowledge and interlingual skills: A discussion of the benefits of translation tasks for second language learners 197
2. Magdalena Trepczyńska – Readers, reviewers, and revisers: L2 writers' strategies in providing and acting upon peer feedback 211

3. Abbas Eslami Rasekh – ESP writing for tourism: A genre-based approach in teaching writing to Iranian university students 223
4. M. Naci Kayaoğlu – Exploring the potential benefits of using on-line tools (weblog-forums) in a writing course in EFL settings 239
5. Ali Şükrü Özbay and M. Naci Kayaoğlu – What do tertiary level EFL writing teachers say but fail to do when providing feedback? 251
6. Siân Morgan – The space between 'yes' and 'no': How Italian students qualify and boost their statements 267

IV. LEARNER FACTORS

1. Martine Derivry-Plard – Students' representations of native speaker teachers of FL 281
2. Gülşen Musayeva Vefali – Do we know our language learners? 293
3. Mahmet Kiliç and Berrin Uçkun – Listening anxiety and the effect of text type on its occurrence 307
4. Noreen Caplan-Spence – English as an additional language or/ and special educational needs? 323

V. SYLLABUSES, RESOURCES AND EXAMINATIONS

1. Melanie Ellis – Design and evaluation of a task-based syllabus for developing speaking skills 333
2. Marek Derenowski – The place of the target language culture in the language classroom: A few modest proposals 347
3. Berrin Uçkun and Sevgin Ersürmeli – The negative washback effect of a high-stakes EFL examination on the English teaching practices in high schools 357
4. Bartosz Wolski – Towards a perfect educational American Studies Web site: The usability of American History online resources to EFL learners 373
5. Dawn Perkins – Expertise in ELT textbook writing: What a case study of an experienced materials designer at work can reveal about materials development 387